A screenshot of a Scoop.it feed. The header shows the Scoop.it logo and the title "Government as a Platform" with a subtitle "From Open Government towards Government as a Platform" and "Curated by estratic". Below the header are buttons for "2.4K Views", "Share", "Filter", "Suggest", and "Follow". The feed displays several articles: 1. "A new model of Open Government: lessons from change management" from www.eylnews.com, dated April 17, 7:27 AM. It includes a diagram showing a progression from "No" to "Workable city/ city as platform" through stages like "No right role", "Compliance with regulations", and "Strategic data selection for efficiency". 2. "33 Guidelines for Open Data Policies" from sunlightfoundation.com, dated Today, 6:45 AM. It includes a small image of a person and text about feedback and open data. 3. "What does Internet Governance have to do with open data?" from govinthelab.com, dated Today, 6:28 AM. It lists three points: 1) Open Data as data accessible online, 2) Open data as machine readable, and 3) Open data as licensed for re-use. 4. "Science as an open enterprise - Report" from royalsociety.org, dated June 23, 11:02 AM. It includes a small image of a DNA helix and text about a report on the impact of new technologies. 5. "Cloud Computing: The Inevitable Answer - IEEE" from theinstitute.ieee.org, dated June 26, 7:56 PM. The articles are separated by "Scoop by estratic" dividers.
